PREFACE.

"Friends, in this Preface sore I'm grieved
So very much is said;
One half will never be believed,
The other never read."

THE Lancing Register owes its existence to the initiative taken in 1885 by the Rev. M. N. Trollope, and to the vast amount of labour expended on the work for more than fifteen years. When reluctantly compelled to discontinue the Register, he handed over his books and papers to the Rev. H. W. McKenzie, Headmaster from 1889 to 1895, who, with the assistance of Mr. F. J. Haverfield, the Sixth Form Master, compiled a complete list of Old Boys from 1848 to 1893. Particulars concerning many of those contained in the list were collected in the eighteen years from 1885 to 1893, and when my work began in 1898 the train had been laid for the present volume. If the Old Boys in general were less retiring, a more complete Register could now have been presented; and this characteristic makes my gratitude all the greater to those who returned the forms sent out to them. A considerable amount of help has also been afforded by Old Boys, of whom the late Mr. R. O. Whitfield and Mr. Gerald Young rendered every assistance in their power. The later portion of the Register is considerably more complete than the earlier, through the kind help afforded by the Rev. W. Back, Chaplain at Lancing, and Mr. R. F. Cardale, of Keble College, Oxford; and for the introduction and general accuracy of any entries which are complete my heartiest thanks are due to the Rev. Edmund Field, without whose help the compilation of the Register had been impossible.

The Headmaster very kindly gave me access to official documents in his keeping, and these were of material assistance in the compilation; and for that assistance, as well as for the enthusiastic support given to the work from beginning to end, my sincere thanks are herein expressed.

Mr. Gerald Young and the Rev. A. W. Rowe contributed most interesting memoirs, from which many Old Boys were traced to their present occupation and address. Lack of skill prevented me welding them into a more interesting whole; but the trouble taken in their original compilation has not been without effect in the ensuing pages.

In conclusion, will all Old Boys kindly note my earnest request that they will mention any inaccuracies or omissions to me, in order that a more complete and less inaccurate edition may be the outcome of this first attempt at a "Lancing Register."

INTRODUCTION.

THE history of St. Nicolas' College shows what may be done for the accomplishment of a great end by the efforts of one man if his whole soul be thrown into his work, if he will for the sake of it spare neither himself nor his means, if he has the courage of his convictions, and will not allow himself to be daunted by opposition. Such a man was Nathaniel Woodard, whose name, we may well trust, will be held in honour among those of the great founders of "Schools and seminaries of religious and wholesome learning," to whom the world owes so much.

Born at Basildon in Essex, March 21, 1811, it was a matter of continual interest to him to remember that his birthday was St. Benedict's Day, and to dwell on the immense services rendered to Christian education by the great founder of the Benedictine Order. His early education was in the hands of private tutors, and in 1834 he matriculated at Oxford from Magdalen Hall, though he did not take his B.A. degree till 1840, some time after his marriage. He was ordained Deacon in 1841, and Priest in the following year, working first at St. Bartholomew's, Bethnal Green, and afterwards at St. James's, Clapton. Like so many of his contemporaries, he had been greatly influenced by "the Oxford Movement," some of the leaders of which were his personal friends, and the principles of which he carried out in his clerical, and afterwards in his scholastic, work. St. Nicolas' College, indeed, was an outcome of the Oxford Movement. His outspoken teaching on the subject of Confession, which he had practised as a boy, led to a controversy with the Bishop of London of that day, and eventually to his consenting, for the sake of peace, to leave the Diocese in 1847, when he became Curate of New Shoreham. It is fair to add that he and Dr. Blomfield very shortly became good friends, and that the Bishop was among the first to subscribe to his Schools.

"The times were out of joint" at home and abroad: indeed, the year 1848 saw thrones all over Europe tottering or fallen, while the discontented in this country were encouraged to dream that it might be possible to bring about something like a revolution. These troubles stirred in the mind of Mr. Woodard thoughts on the disruption of Society, and on the antagonism of classes, which had been forced upon him when working in the East End of London. He traced the evil to lack of training in the principles of the Church, God—great bond of union between men of all ranks. The National Schools were indeed already doing good work for the poor, but their work was frequently undone by the employer of labour, too often indifferent to the Church, through ignorance of her nature and claims, while the Reform Act of 1832 had greatly increased his political influence. The remedy Mr. Woodard proposed was Public School Education on definite Church principles for all classes except the lowest. It had been the system under which Englishmen of higher grades had learned habits of self-government and self-reliance, and of freedom combined with submission to authority, which fitted them for their part as citizens, and—as thoughtful men on the Continent were observing—enabled us to escape the worst political troubles of our neighbours. Why should not a system which had done so much be widely extended in its sphere? These thoughts found vent first in pamphlets on "Public Schools for the Middle Classes," then in opening a school in his own house, and afterwards in the foundation of St. Nicolas' College, since the only guarantee for the permanence of his work would lie in its being entrusted not to an individual but to a Society.

From the first he laid great emphasis upon the Church character of his scheme. His Schools were to be carried on in accordance with the principles of the Church of England, as laid down in the Book of Common Prayer, and from these he would not budge an inch to conciliate popular favour by abandoning unpopular practices or doctrines. Like his friend Archdeacon Denison, he had no love for "Conscience clauses." If boys were sent to him, it must be as English Churchmen only that he would have anything to do with their training. It was not, of course, to be expected that an uncompromising line on questions of Church principle would fail to arouse hostility, but the courage and perseverance of the man prevailed in the long run. Rulers in the ecclesiastical and in the political world gave his plan their generous support: Archbishops Longley, Benson, Temple and Maclagan; Bishops Phillpotts, Moberly, Wordsworth, Wilberforce and King; Dr. Pusey, John Keble, Canons Mozley and Liddon, and Dean Church amongst others. Lord Salisbury, who had been early associated with him in the foundation of his Society, nominated him for the honorary degree of D.C.L. at his installation as Chancellor of the University of Oxford, while through the good offices of Mr. Gladstone he became a Canon, in 1870, of Manchester Cathedral. His own spirit of self-sacrifice stirred up the munificence of others; "cheerful givers," like the late Henry Tritton, gave him their tens of thousands, and more than half a million of money has been forthcoming for the erection of his schools. Eleven of these had been opened before he died, worn out in mind as well as in body, in 1891. Two have been added since, with an aggregate in all of 1,600 scholars—no mean contribution for one man to have made to the educational machinery of the country.

At first Mr. Woodard had thought only of the education of the Middle Class, but gradually his ideas took a wider range. Boys of very different social position were sent to him; the great Public Schools, while they had gained greatly in high moral tone, were insisting less on the distinctive teaching of the Church; the doors of some of them were being opened to those outside the pale of Christianity altogether, and the necessity forced itself upon him of providing definite religious training for the higher ranks of Society as well as for the lower. Hence when he placed his scheme in definite shape before the world—in a letter addressed in 1869 to the Marquis of Salisbury, one of the Trustees of the College—he proposed to divide the country out into five districts, each with its own College, consisting of Provost and Fellows, and each offering education in schools of three different grades—the Upper Class, the Middle Class, and the Lower Middle Class—while the whole would be united under the government of the "Corporation of SS. Mary and Nicolas."

Of these five centres three only are established—the Colleges of SS. Mary and Nicolas of Lancing, SS. Mary and John of Lichfield, and SS. Mary and Andrew of Taunton. It is with the first of these that we are now concerned, and indeed only with its Upper Grade School, the one school of this type as yet belonging to the Society. Beginning in Mr. Woodard's own house in 1847, it came, as it gradually increased, to be lodged in different houses in the town, until a fitting site could be secured and buildings erected, while the grand old Church supplied the services which the boys attended. The Rev. C. H. Christie had taught the boys when they were lodged in the Founder's house, and he was succeeded by the Rev. Charles Edward Moberly, afterwards a Master of Rugby in the reign of Dr. Temple, whose sister he had married. To him succeeded the Rev. John Branthwaite, Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford, a man of varied accomplishments and saintly life, one of those who, in the early enthusiasm of the Society, threw themselves and their means heartily into its work.

The "old Shoreham days" still linger fondly in the memories of many who then belonged to the School, in spite of the roughness and discomfort which were inevitable when much was necessarily temporary and make-shift in view of the impending removal to permanent buildings: indeed, it must be admitted that until the changes of comparatively recent times, the domestic arrangements were not such as commend themselves to the latter part of the nineteenth century. This, indeed, fell in with Canon Woodard's ideas. He had a contempt for coddling, and thought the roughness of old-fashioned public-school life not without its value in the formation of a simple, manly character, and in preparing boys to face the difficulties before them in the world.

At one time it had been hoped that the School would find its permanent home in the outskirts of Shoreham, on land belonging to Magdalen College, Oxford; but eventually a property of 230 acres was bought in the adjoining parish of Lancing, which, with its dry soil, pure air and noble sea view, supplied an ideal site for a great School. Hither on March 21, 1854, Mr. Woodard led up from Shoreham the sixty boys who formed the nucleus of the School, to lay what was literally the first stone of his future College. Few of those present will forget the bleak March morning, the simple ceremonial, and the Latin hymn—Te Deum Patrem colimus, as sung on May morning on the top of Magdalen Tower. It is interesting to know that of the sixty boys many have given a good account of themselves in after life. Fifteen of them have lived to attain the priesthood, and of these one is a Bishop and one an Archdeacon; five others, besides those ordained, went to Oxford or Cambridge. Among them they got four First Classes and won three Fellowships, the winners of two of which have since been President of Trinity College, Oxford, and Master of University College, Durham, while the third, after being for some years Head Master of St. Peter's School, York, has since filled the office of Hulsean Lecturer. One became Colonial Secretary of Trinidad, and fourteen entered the Army or Navy, for those were the days of the Crimean War, when, after a long peace, burning to fight the battles of their country, as they burn now to be off to South Africa.

"All the youth of England were on fire"

Meanwhile the building on the hill-side was slowly rising, and in 1855 the foundation stone of the Hall was laid by Sir John Patteson, one of the Trustees. Lancing would, its Founder hoped, one day take its place amongst the highest of our Public Schools, and the magnificent scale on which its Home was designed is an evidence that no lower ideal lay before his mind. He was well aware of the silent influence of grand architecture on the impressionable mind of the young, and was determined that the College should be second to none in the dignity and beauty of its surroundings. This was especially the case with the vast Chapel, the corner-stone of which was laid by the first Visitor, Bishop Gilbert, in 1868, the preacher on the occasion being Bishop Wilberforce, whose eloquent voice was heard from time to time in all the Sussex Schools of the Society. No doubt wishes have often been expressed that it had been designed on a less costly scale, but such wishes were, we may be sure, often uttered by those who watched our great cathedrals rising slowly, sometimes through centuries, to completion; and if in their case we feel that the long delay was justified by the greatness of their object, a similar plea may surely be advanced on behalf of those who feel the supreme importance of Christian training for those whom God has created for an eternity to be spent in His presence. Solid as the walls of the Chapel are, and deep as are its foundations, it may well last a thousand years, and if, during that time, generations of boys have had brought home to heart and conscience the great truths of our holy religion, and learned how to offer acceptable worship to God, the cost and the delay will not have been in vain.

So at any rate thought Canon Woodard, who himself gave more largely than any to the building fund, and who met the criticisms freely lavished on the scale and costliness of the edifice and the long years which must elapse before it could be finished, by saying: "The Chapel is a Creed in stone, an emphatic assertion of belief in the Church's teaching; it will be a standing witness, seen far and wide, that we hold religion to be the basis of all true education, in days when men attempt to sever one from the other." While the Chapel is in progress, the Crypt, lighted as it is from the north and east, where the ground falls away, is a fitting place for Divine worship. It has a dignified principal altar, and windows in the sanctuary (by Clayton and Bell, the gift of Mrs. Lowe, the wife of the second Provost) representing our Lord on the Cross, SS. Mary and John, St. Nicolas and St. Benedict. A chapel at the east end of the south aisle is dedicated in memory of the Founder, who lies beneath it; it is decorated with marbles, the altar having an elaborate alabaster reredos, with figures of the patron saints of schools founded during his life-time; a window above the altar, the gift of Lord Salisbury, represents our Lord's Resurrection, and another on the south side contains the figure of the Founder offering to God the Chapel on which so much of his time, his means and care were spent.

Lancing has other fine buildings besides its Chapel, chiefly erected during the long and flourishing Head-mastership of Canon Sanderson, and all designed by Richard Carpenter or his son: a noble school-room, with oak panelling and floor, and with twelve class-rooms, the gift (with a range of thirty boys' studies) of an alumnus, Mr. Henry Martin Gibbs; a large hall; a library in which are stored books bequeathed by Archdeacon Hare, Dr. John Mason Neale and others; a laboratory and a gymnasium. A new cricket ground, with pavilion, owes much to the late Head Master, the Rev. H. W. McKenzie, while his successor, the Rev. Dr. Ambrose Wilson, is projecting a swimming bath which can be used summer and winter.

It was not until the year 1857 that the buildings were sufficiently advanced to make it possible for the School to occupy them. Mr. Branthwaite was still Head Master, and amongst others of the staff who migrated with him from Shoreham were two who have now passed away, and whose names will be read by many with affectionate remembrance—the Rev. Arthur Charles Wilson, formerly Student of Christ Church, and for many years Second Master; and the Rev.

William Sterne Raymond, who died within the walls of the College in 1863, much loved by all, the Fives Courts being erected as his memorial. In 1859 Mr. Branthwaite, whose health had long been failing, resigned the Head-mastership, and for a time lived at Queen's College, Oxford, of which he was a Fellow. Subsequently he became Principal of S. Edmund Hall, and was drowned in 1864 while bathing in Morecambe Bay. As Head Master of the School he was succeeded by the Rev. Henry Walford, who had been one of Dr. Arnold's Sixth Form at Rugby. He held the post for two years only, and was followed by the Rev. Robert Edward Sanderson, who had formerly been Head Master of Bradfield, and under whom the numbers of the School were trebled. After a reign of twenty-eight years he was presented by Dr. Durnford, Bishop of Chichester, to a Canonry in the Cathedral, the Chapter of which he represents in the Lower House of Convocation, with the Rectory of St. Michael, Brighton. It was in the time of his successor, the Rev. Harry Ward McKenzie, that Canon Woodard, who had for some time been unable to take any active part in the management of his Society, passed away in his eighty-first year, in the year 1891. He was buried beneath the Founder's Chapel, a large number of those who had helped him in the accomplishment of his great work being gathered round his grave. The new Provost was the Rev. Edward Clarke Lowe, one of the earliest of Canon Woodard's fellow-workers, who had ruled Hurstpierpoint with singular energy and success, and had afterwards been Provost of the Midland Branch of the College, and borne much of the labour in the foundation of the schools at Denstone, Ellesmere, Worksop, Abbots Bromley, Bangor and Dewsbury. In 1880 he had become Canon of Ely on the nomination of Mr. Gladstone, and for some years has been the representative of the Chapter in Convocation. In accordance with the superannuation rule of the College, he retired at the close of 1898, and was succeeded by the present Provost—the Right Reverend and Honourable Arthur Temple Lyttelton, Suffragan

Bishop of Southampton. On the retirement from Lancing of Mr. McKenzie in 1895, the Rev. Ambrose John Wilson, D.D., became Head Master, having formerly been Scholar of St. John's and Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford, and more recently Head Master of the Church of England Grammar School at Melbourne. It has been during his tenure of office that the College kept its Jubilee in 1899. The Chapel, though far indeed from being finished, was still sufficiently advanced to make such a Commemoration possible within its walls, and a large concourse, including representatives of the different Schools of the Society, assembled within it for a simple Service of Thanksgiving, the sermon being preached by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Floreat Collegium must be our words as we close our account of St. Nicolas' College: Requiescat in pace, as we think of the remarkable man whom many generations of those educated within its Schools will, we trust, venerate as their Founder.
